EDDY WILL BE TEST IS ON.

Attorneys For Estate Deny Son's
Right to Bring Suit.

George W. Glover's efforts to break the will of his mother, Mary Baker G.
Eddy, will be fought bitterly by the attorneys representing the executors of her estate and the directors of the Christian Science church. They have recently filed an answer to Glover's bill asking the court at Concord, N.
H., to construe his mother's will.

The answer says that the mother church of the Christian Science and organization has more than 50,000 members, with more than 1,200 branches

GEORGE W. GLOVER.

and that its purpose is essentially charitable. This, it is alleged, relieves it from the operation of the Massachusetts law forbidding a bequest to a church which will yield an income of more than $2,000 a year.

The defendants aver that the residue of Mrs. Eddy's estate was left to the Christian Science denomination as a whole and not to "any one church," as referred to in the Massachusetts statute and as similarly intended by the New Hampshire statute.

They say further that the bringing of the present bill was and is "a flagrant breach of faith on the part of the plaintiff and of his said managing attorney, William E. Chandler," under the terms of the family settlement.

The defendants further say: "While the plaintiff's bill purports to be a petition for advice and direction as to the construction and validity of the above mentioned legacies and trust bequests to said mother church and its board of directors, it is in purpose and substance a bill seeking the annulment of said legacies and trusts."

Under the settlement mentioned Glover received $125,000 from his mother, and a trust fund of the same amount was established for the benefit of his children. This settlement was made two or three years ago after a suit had been filed asking that a conservator be named to care for Mrs.
Eddy's property on the ground that she was incompetent.

"DROPS IN" ON KING.

English Aviator Calls at Windsor Castle in Aeroplane.

"Drop in to see me some time," said King George, and as a result of the invitation Thomas Sopwith, an English aviator, who is only twenty-two years old, flew to Windsor castle, circled around the tower and then alighted on the lawn in the presence of his majesty.

This was the first visit ever made to royalty through the air. The start was made from Brooklands, twenty miles from Windsor castle, and the journey was made on a day so cold that the water froze in three tubes of the radiator as they were being filled.

THOMAS SOPWITH.

The day was also foggy, and the accident occurred only to a height of about 1,000 feet, as there was danger of his losing his way.

King George was deeply interested in the aeroplane, which he inspected closely. It was a Wright biplane, made in England, and his majesty expressed gratification that Sopwith had not used a foreign machine in making the flight.

The aviator, his brother-in-law and two sisters were invited into Windsor castle for tea, the visit having been made about 3 o'clock in the afternoon.
During the luncheon the king discussed the future of aviation and was deeply interested in Sopwith's stories of his experiences in the air.

Sopwith won the prize of $20,000 offered by Baron de Forest for the longest flight made during 1910 in a British aeroplane across the channel and into Europe. He flew Dec. 18 from Eastchurch, Isle of Sheppey, to Beaumont, Belgium, 177 miles. Other aviators tried later to beat this feat, but all failed, one of them, Cecil Grace, losing his life in the attempt.

Water-spouts.

A waterspout is a miniature tornado originating in a strong upward draft of air which occurs above the surface of a body of comparatively warm water. Its effect first becomes visible in a circular motion at the point in the clouds to which it ascends. This becomes a whirl, which condenses the vapor at its center, causing the portion of the cloud there to drop downward in the shape of a gigantic jelly bag. At the same time the continuing upward draft increases the rapidity of its original swirl and the condensed vapor caught within it until the ascending and descending masses join to form the waterspout. Necessarily by this process the air beneath the spout is rarefied, and thus where the phenomenon occurs at sea the water always seems to be sucked up into it, although this is not really the case to any considerable extent. For similar reasons where a waterspout or tornado passes over a building it does most of its damage by exhausting the air outside, causing what is within to expand and blow the structure to pieces.

The White Whale.

The white whale, or beluga, is an arctic cetacean and closely allied to the narwhal. It is pure white in color, twelve to eighteen feet long, whale-like in form, with a huge muzzle and numerous sharp conical teeth.

The white whale swims with extraordinary speed by doubling its huge tail under its body and then striking out with it. Scientists who have studied it in its natural environs say that it is able to catch the swiftest of fishes, often pursuing its prey far up the northern rivers. It is gregarious and may be seen at times in herds of forty or fifty.

These herds not infrequently gambol around boats in the arctic seas, and the natives of Greenland often capture them with harpoons or nets. The flesh of the white whale, in fact, is a considerable source of food supply to them. From it also is derived one of the finest grades of commercial oil.
The skins are tanned and the leather sold in the trade as "porpoise hide."

Sing a Song of Sixpence.

The London Globe attempts an explanation of the rhyme "Sing a Song of Sixpence." Here it is: "The four and twenty blackbirds represent the four and twenty hours. The bottom of the pie is the world. The top crust represents the sky. The opening of the pie is the dawn of the day, when the birds begin to sing, and surely such a sight is fit for a king. The king in his counting house counting out his money is the sun. The money the king is counting represents the golden sunshine. The queen, who sits in the parlor, is the moon. The honey she is eating is the moonlight. The industrious maid who is working in the garden before the sun has risen is the day dawn, and the clothes she hangs out are clouds. The bird that so tragically ends the song by alighting off her nose is the hour of sunset."

Traditions of Mother Shipton.

Of all British prophets Mother Shipton is beyond doubt the most celebrated. She was, in fact, all that a prophet and witch should be, in strange contrast to the serious and scientific nostradamus. The day she was born the sky became dark and gloomy and, according to her biographer, "beheld not nothing for an hour but flames, thundering after a most hideous manner." Her personal appearance, described by her admiring biographer in 1902, is scarcely flattering: "Her physiognomy was so misshapen that it is altogether impossible to express fully in words or for the most ingenious to line her in colors, though many persons of eminent qualifications in that line have often attempted it, but without success."— Metropolitan Magazine.

Ups and Downs.

Not every statesman takes his dismissal with the humor of the Duc d'Enghien, who fell into disgrace with Henry of Navarre. Descending one day the great staircase of the Louvre, he met Richelieu ascending it, and on the cardinal asking indifferently if there was anything new taking place D'Enghien replied, "Nothing, except that, as you see, I am going down and you are going up!" Mr. Blomfield Burton tells the story in "The Fate of Henry of Navarre."

Advanced Fast.

"Mike, didn't you have some trouble when you landed at New York?"
"Divil a bit, sor."
"You hadn't any password admitting you to the country, had you?"
"No, sor, but before I had been in the country tin days I had the grip."— Chicago Tribune.

Not Always Desirable.

"Shall we advertise for a man with experience?"
"Well, I don't know. The last man had so much experience that we couldn't teach him anything."—Pittsburgh Post.
